Qwen

From Edification to Doctrine: The Unbroken Witness of the Early Church Against a Two-Tiered Canon

The Athanasian Letter: A Foundational Text for the Two-Tiered Canon Claim

The assertion of a two-tiered canon within the early Church finds its most potent textual support in the 39th Festal Letter of Athanasius of Alexandria, written in 367 AD [33]. In this epistle, Athanasius provides a comprehensive list of canonical books for both the Old and New Testaments, explicitly stating, "In these alone is proclaimed the doctrine of godliness. Let no man add to these, neither let him take ought from these" [53] [55]. Following this definitive enumeration, he introduces a crucial distinction, noting that certain other books are not included in the canonical list but are nonetheless appointed by the Fathers for reading by those who are newly converted and seek instruction in the word of godliness [34]. He specifies these non-canonical, yet read, works as including the Wisdom of Solomon, the Wisdom of Sirach, Esther, Judith, Tobit, the book called the Teaching of the Apostles, and the Shepherd [36] [51]. On the surface, this appears to be a clear articulation of a hierarchical system: a core set of divinely inspired books forming the foundation of faith, and a secondary collection of useful but uninspired texts intended for moral edification and catechesis. This distinction has been historically invoked to suggest that even before the Reformation, there existed a recognized category of "apocryphal" books—valuable for instruction but lacking doctrinal authority [59].

However, a thorough analysis reveals that interpreting Athanasius's letter as a definitive statement on the inspiration of these books requires ignoring critical contextual factors. First, the very existence of a formal "Council of Jamnia" around 90 AD, often cited as the arbiter of the Jewish canon, is now considered by modern scholarship to be a scholarly fabrication rather than a historical event [12] [74]. The process of canonization among the Jews was far more gradual and lacked a single, decisive moment of closure . Therefore, any argument seeking to define the biblical canon based on a post-Apostolic Jewish council is built upon a flawed premise [61]. More importantly, the early Christian Church, including figures like Athanasius, operated primarily with the Septuagint, the ancient Greek translation of the Hebrew scriptures that had become the Bible of the Hellenistic world and the one quoted most frequently by the New Testament authors [15] [17] [69]. The Septuagint inherently included the Deuterocanonical books precisely because they were already considered sacred and authoritative by many Diaspora Jews and were an integral part of the scriptural heritage used by the nascent Christian community [20]. To privilege a later, narrower Hebrew canon over the living scriptural practice of the Apostles and the first-century Church is to reverse history [16]. The true standard for the New Testament Church was not the revised canon of rabbis but the Septuagint, the version of the Old Testament through which the Holy Spirit spoke to the earliest Christians [61].

Furthermore, the distinction made by Athanasius must be understood within the practical context of his pastoral purpose. His primary goal was to provide a clear, authoritative list of Scriptures for the faithful to study and to protect them from heretical additions [55]. It is highly probable that his distinction was one of usage and familiarity rather than ontological authority. Books less familiar to some communities or deemed more suitable for instructing new converts may have been placed in a separate category for pedagogical reasons. This interpretation is supported by the fact that even books labeled as "apocryphal" by Athanasius were still being read publicly in the Church [10]. The sharp division between a fully canonical and a merely "read" text is a modern construct that may impose a later theological framework onto Athanasius's nuanced, context-dependent categorization. The evidence from the broader patristic period suggests that while lists might differ, the underlying principle of treating the entire scriptural corpus as a source of divine revelation remained consistent.

Event / Figure	Year	Canonical Position
Council of Hippo	393	Affirmed the canon of Scripture, including the Deuterocanonical books, reflecting the consensus of the Western Church [11] [70].
Council of Carthage	397	Reaffirmed the canon established at Hippo, solidifying its acceptance in North Africa and influencing the wider Church [11] [70].
Augustine of Hippo	c. 354–430	Explicitly lists and defends the canonicity of deuterocanonical books (e.g., Judith, Tobit, Wisdom, Sirach, Maccabees) in his writings, especially On Christian Doctrine [13] [29].
Athanasius of Alexandria	c. 296–373	In his 39th Festal Letter (367 AD), provides a list of canonical books and separates them from other writings (e.g., Wisdom, Sirach, Judith, Tobit) that were read for instruction but not included in the canon [34] [51].
Jerome	c. 347–420	Translates the Bible into Latin (the Vulgate), working from Hebrew and Greek sources. While personally preferring the Hebrew text, his translations include the deuterocanonical books and were accepted by the Church [37] [64].

Apostolic Authority: The Use of Deuterocanonical Texts in Defining Core Doctrine

The claim that Deuterocanonical books were relegated to a secondary status of mere edification is directly refuted by the demonstrable way in which the New Testament authors themselves utilized these very texts to articulate and defend foundational Christian doctrines. The early Christian community, guided by the Apostles, viewed the Septuagint—the Greek translation of the Old Testament that contained the Deuterocanon—as an integral part of the sacred text through which God spoke [15] [17]. Their citations were not acts of selective appropriation for moral exhortation but were foundational acts of dogmatic construction. For instance, the Epistle to the Hebrews builds a powerful argument for the resurrection of the dead on the story of the seven brothers and their mother found exclusively in the Deuterocanonical book of 2 Maccabees [3]. The author cites their martyrdom—"They were tortured, refusing to accept release, so that they might rise again to a better life"—as proof of the reasonable hope of a future resurrection (Hebrews 11:35-37) [3]. If the book from which this argument is drawn were considered non-canonical or merely for edification, the entire doctrinal structure would be undermined. Similarly, the Epistle of James invokes Abraham's offering of Isaac and then states, "And the scripture was fulfilled that says, 'Abraham believed God, and it was counted to him as righteousness'; and he was called a friend of God" (James 2:23) [29]. The quotation is not from Genesis, the protocanonical book of the same name, but from the Book of Sirach, another Deuterocanonical work [5]. This demonstrates a direct derivation of a key doctrine of the faith—justification—as being confirmed by a passage from a book outside the standard Jewish scriptures.

Further complicating a simple two-tiered model is the Epistle of Jude, which quotes directly from the Book of Enoch, a pseudepigraphal work not found in either the Jewish or Protestant canon [26] [27]. Jude refers to this citation as "the prophecy of Enoch" (Jude 1:14-15) [46]. While citing a non-canonical text for illustrative purposes is distinct from using a canonical one for doctrinal formation, it highlights the early Church's willingness to draw from a wider pool of sacred literature than what would later be codified. These instances are not isolated but indicative of a theological method that seamlessly integrated the entirety of the scriptural corpus available to them. The distinction between a book's "doctrinal" versus "moral" authority, which forms the basis of the objection, is a modern category foreign to the integrated theological world of the early Church, where every part of the scriptural witness was seen as contributing to the unfolding of divine revelation. Rejecting the doctrinal authority of the Deuterocanon based on these examples requires a reader to ignore or reinterpret the very way in which the Apostles constructed the bedrock of Christian belief. The early Church's practice demonstrates a holistic view of Scripture where every part contributes to the whole, and the sharp division between "doctrinal" and "moral" books was not one of authority but of emphasis. The Deuterocanon was not just read; it was used to define what it meant to be a Christian.

Patristic Practice: Augustine and the Fathers on the Canonicity of Wisdom and Sirach

The theological application of Deuterocanonical texts by the early Church Fathers provides overwhelming evidence against a two-tiered model of canonicity. No figure exemplifies this more than St. Augustine of Hippo. In his seminal work On Christian Doctrine, Augustine provides a detailed list of canonical books, explicitly acknowledging the broader corpus that includes the Deuterocanon [29]. He names books such as Judith, 1 and 2 Maccabees, Tobit, Wisdom of Solomon, and Sirach, treating them as part of the sacred canon alongside other contested works [13]. His acceptance was not a private opinion but the expression of the prevailing orthodoxy of the Latin Church, bridging the Eastern and Western traditions for over a thousand years [29]. Augustine famously employed the Wisdom of Solomon to expound upon the doctrine of original sin, drawing on its language about humanity's creation and subsequent fall into sin [41] [56]. This was not mere moral exhortation; it was foundational dogma being built upon a Deuterocanonical text [72]. Similarly, he used passages from Sirach to illustrate the necessity of divine grace for salvation, countering the teachings of Pelagius [39]. Augustine’s theology was deeply dependent on these books for articulating the very heart of Christian soteriology.

This practice was not unique to Augustine but represented the consensus of the early theologians. The teaching on praying for the dead, which led to the development of the doctrine of Purgatory, is rooted in a passage from 2 Maccabees 12:43-46, which describes Judas Maccabeus offering a sacrifice for fallen soldiers, stating it was "a holy and wholesome thought" to pray for the dead [3] [66]. Such a practice and its theological justification are unthinkable without the perceived authority of the Deuterocanonical text. Even figures like Jerome, who championed a return to the Hebrew text, reluctantly translated books like Tobit and Judith, revealing his recognition of the Church's attachment to them [37] [64]. The early Church's consistent practice demonstrates a holistic view of Scripture where every part contributes to the whole. The distinction between "doctrinal" and "moral" books was not one of authority but of emphasis. The Deuterocanon was not just read; it was used to define what it meant to be a Christian. Rejecting its doctrinal authority severs one from the theological inheritance of the entire apostolic and patristic era. The idea that Trent bestowed divine authority upon books previously held as authoritative by the apostolic Church is a historical and theological non-starter, as the very councils cited as precedents for Trent's action—namely the Councils of Hippo (393 AD) and Carthage (397 AD)—had already settled the matter, establishing a canon that included the Deuterocanonical books [9] [57]. To argue that their judgment was insufficient and required a millennium-and-a-half of delay is to introduce a radical discontinuity into the history of revelation that has no basis in the sources [57].

Ecclesial Consensus: The Primacy of Council Decrees over Individual Opinions

While figures like Jerome expressed personal reservations about the Deuterocanon, prioritizing the Hebrew Masoretic Text, the mind of the early Church is best discerned not through the private opinions of individual scholars but through the collective voice of the ecclesiastical Magisterium, as articulated in conciliar decrees and universal patristic consensus [12]. Jerome's preference for the Hebrew text was a scholarly position, and while influential, it did not override the institutional tradition of the Western Church, which had long embraced the Septuagint as its Old Testament [14]. Jerome himself undertook the monumental task of translating the entire Bible, including the Deuterocanon, into Latin (the Vulgate) because the Church valued these texts and needed an accurate translation for public worship and theological study [37] [64]. His personal dissent was ultimately subsumed by the authority of the institution he served. To focus solely on Jerome's criticisms while disregarding the affirmations of Augustine, Ambrose, Gregory of Nyssa, and countless others is to engage in a highly selective reading designed to serve a predetermined conclusion rather than to arrive at an objective understanding of history [10].

The Councils of Hippo (393 AD) and Carthage (397 AD) represent the definitive articulation of this ecclesial consensus in the West [11] [70]. These African councils were not inventing a new canon but were codifying the long-standing practice of the Church. They affirmed a canon that included the Deuterocanonical books, thereby settling the matter for the Western Church centuries before the Protestant Reformation [9]. The significance of these councils cannot be overstated; they reflect the widespread usage of the Scriptures within the Western Church and carry weight precisely because they articulated what had been the common understanding for generations [11]. The argument that Trent created the canon is thus exposed as a historical fiction, as the full canon was already definitively settled [57]. The demand for a later definition retroactively nullifies the authority of the first millennium of Christian history, creating a logical contradiction for the apologist who accepts the content of the canon from the early Church while denying the authority of that same Church to define it [57]. This stance is a form of "selective magisterialism," where the individual's private judgment becomes the ultimate arbiter of which parts of the early Church's teaching are acceptable [57]. The true witness of the Fathers, when taken as a whole, overwhelmingly supports the Catholic position, and any attempt to undermine it must reckon with this totality, not a fragmentary selection of dissenting voices.

Synthesis: The Unity of the Scriptural Deposit in the Early Church

In synthesizing the evidence, it becomes clear that the concept of a two-tiered canon, distinguishing between books commanding divine assent and those used only for edification, is a modern theological construct rather than an authentic patristic reality. The early Church Fathers, operating within the scriptural framework of the Septuagint, viewed their collection of sacred writings as a unified deposit of divine revelation [15] [17]. The sharp distinction between a "canonical" and a "non-canonical" tier, as understood in later Protestant theology, finds no footing in the integrated theological world of the Apostles and the first five centuries [59]. The very premise that the Deuterocanon lacks doctrinal authority is directly contradicted by its demonstrable use in defining core Christian beliefs. The New Testament itself draws upon Deuterocanonical books to establish the resurrection of the dead (Hebrews 11 citing 2 Maccabees) and the doctrine of justification (James 2:23 citing Sirach) [3] [29]. The early Church Fathers, most notably Augustine, built foundational dogmas like original sin upon texts such as Wisdom of Solomon [41] [56].

Athanasius's 39th Festal Letter, while providing a formal list, should be interpreted not as a denial of inspiration but as a practical guide for catechetical instruction, separating books for different levels of use within the Church [55]. The overwhelming consensus of the early Church, articulated in the councils of Hippo and Carthage and affirmed by the universal witness of the Fathers, treated the entire collection of books—including the Deuterocanon—as equally sacred and authoritative [11] [70]. The appeal to a "Council of Jamnia" as the ultimate arbiter of the canon is based on a historical myth and represents a reversal of history, privileging a post-Christian Jewish redefinition over the living scriptural practice of the Apostles, who used the Septuagint [12] [61]. Ultimately, the objections to the Deuterocanon collapse under the weight of their own internal inconsistencies. They require a reader to sever themselves from the theological inheritance of the entire apostolic and patristic era, a move that is both historically inaccurate and theologically untenable. The Catholic canon stands as the authentic and complete collection of sacred Scripture, preserved and transmitted by the one, holy, catholic, and apostolic Church, the pillar and bulwark of the truth [63].

Reference

1. (PDF) Pentecostal Canon of the Bible? - ResearchGate https://www.researchgate.net/publication/339481047_Pentecostal_Canon_of_the_Bible
2. History of The Sacred Scriptures of The New Testament, Vol. 2, E ... https://www.scribd.com/document/99069381/History-of-the-Sacred-Scriptures-of-the-New-Testament-Vol-2-E-Reuss-1884
3. SURVEY OF PERIODICALS: OLD TESTAMENT - jstor https://www.jstor.org/stable/43710431
4. Augustine https://pilgrimsofchrist.com/tag/augustine/
5. Christian interpretation of Esther before the Reformation https://journals.sagepub.com/doi/10.1177/00346373211024130
6. The Study and Evaluation of Judaism in European Christendom - jstor https://www.jstor.org/stable/1869133
7. (PDF) Newman's First Two Notes on Development and Patristic ... https://www.researchgate.net/publication/277019093_Newman's_First_Two_Notes_on_Development_and_Patristic_Millenarianism
8. Canon Law (Part III) - The Cambridge History of the Papacy https://www.cambridge.org/core/books/cambridge-history-of-the-papacy/canon-law/BA6B128D9F32257EA553B010BAADCEFF

9. Reformation's Deuterocanon Debate Explained | PDF | Biblical Canon https://www.scribd.com/document/526355891/The-Reformation-Rejection-of-the-Deuterocanonical-Books
10. Latin Christian Lists - Oxford Academic https://academic.oup.com/book/25501/chapter/192734896
11. A Complete History of The Biblical Canon in The Christian East and ... https://www.scribd.com/document/840389839/A-Complete-History-of-the-Biblical-Canon-in-the-Christian-East-and-West-Vol-1-Greek-Latin-and-Slavic-Biblical-Canon-from-the-New-Testament-until
12. Inventing the Apocrypha: The Role of Early Latin Canon Lists https://www.researchgate.net/publication/254109251_Inventing_the_Apocrypha_The_Role_of_Early_Latin_Canon_Lists
13. Biblical Canon of the Synod of Hippo – The 4 Marks https://4marksofthechurch.com/biblical-canon-of-the-synod-of-hippo/
14. [PDF] Greek and Latin interpretations from the 2nd to the 5th century CE https://pdfs.semanticscholar.org/9534/021d6962a794e4631c4793f097f3b046d917.pdf
15. (PDF) Review: The Septuagint as Christian Scripture. Its Prehistory ... https://www.researchgate.net/publication/31301683_Review_The_Septuagint_as_Christian_Scripture_Its_Prehistory_and_the_Problem_of_its_Canon
16. 5 Is the Septuagint the Old Testament of the Church Fathers? https://academic.oup.com/book/39198/chapter/338691834
17. The Septuagint as a holy text – The first 'bible' of the early church https://www.academia.edu/82738760/The_Septuagint_as_a_holy_text_The_first_bible_of_the_early_church
18. Church Fathers | Springer Nature Link https://link.springer.com/rwe/10.1007/978-94-024-1665-7_125
19. Introduction | The Oxford Handbook of Textual Criticism of the Bible https://academic.oup.com/edited-volume/61539/chapter/537115214
20. The Septuagint as Canon - Simon Crisp, 2016 - Sage Journals https://journals.sagepub.com/doi/10.1177/2051677016649429
21. Rethinking the Relationship Between Wisdom of Solomon 13–15 ... https://www.cambridge.org/core/journals/new-testament-studies/article/announcing-the-human-rethinking-the-relationship-between-wisdom-of-solomon-1315-and-romans-118211/6F5AF2AF74A8DF6A5D629BCD3DCEB33E
22. [PDF] The Jewish Understanding of the Scriptural Solomon Narrative https://escholarship.org/content/qt5sm9073q/qt5sm9073q_noSplash_67faca2dbaaa9f4dc24ce7f080d9c582.pdf

23. WISDOM OF SOLOMON AND PAUL'S LETTER TO THE ROMANS ... https://www.researchgate.net/publication/277746425_GOD_GRACE_AND_RIGHTEOUSNESS_WISDOM_OF_SOLOMON_AND_PAUL'S_LETTER_TO_THE_ROMANS_IN_CONVERSATION
24. (PDF) Wisdom of Solomon and Biblical Interpretation in the Second ... https://www.academia.edu/734476/Wisdom_of_Solomon_and_Biblical_Interpretation_in_the_Second_Temple_Period_
25. Wisdom in the Jewish and Christian Scriptures: The Hebrew Bible ... https://journals.sagepub.com/doi/10.1177/0040571X10395465
26. Early Sixteenth-Century Interpretations of Jude 9 and Jude 14–15 https://journals.sagepub.com/doi/abs/10.1177/0951820713514924
27. a new testament background study of jude 9 and 14-15 https://www.academia.edu/7784608/A_NEW_TESTAMENT_BACKGROUND_STUDY_OF_JUDE_9_AND_14_15
28. The Didache: A Moral and Liturgical Document of Instruction https://www.worldhistory.org/article/904/the-didache-a-moral-and-liturgical-document-of-ins/
29. (PDF) Justification by Faith: a Patristic Doctrine - ResearchGate https://www.researchgate.net/publication/231906552_Justification_by_Faith_a_Patristic_Doctrine
30. Canon Lists Are Not Just Lists - jstor https://www.jstor.org/stable/10.15699/jbl.1394.2020.10
31. Toward the New Testament Canon as Fourth-Century Invention https://www.researchgate.net/publication/374473527_Toward_the_New_Testament_Canon_as_Fourth-Century_Invention_The_Scriptural_List_of_Athanasius_and_Its_Reverberations
32. Toward the New Testament Canon as Fourth-Century Invention https://www.academia.edu/105887721/Toward_the_New_Testament_Canon_as_Fourth_Century_Invention_The_Scriptural_List_of_Athanasius_and_Its_Reverberations
33. Biblical Canon of Athanasius – The 4 Marks https://4marksofthechurch.com/biblical-canon-of-athanasius/
34. A New Fragment of Athanasius's Thirty-Ninth Festal Letter. Heresy ... https://www.jstor.org/stable/40390061
35. A New Fragment of Athanasius's Thirty-Ninth Festal Letter https://www.cambridge.org/core/journals/harvard-theological-review/article/new-fragment-of-athanasiuss-thirtyninth-festal-letter-heresy-apocrypha-and-the-canon/A089F889895A8B49B6848A177978D7D4

36. A New Fragment of Athanasius's 39th Festal Letter - Academia.edu https://www.academia.edu/1853545/A_New_Fragment_of_Athanasiuss_39th_Festal_Letter_Heresy_Apocrypha_and_the_Canon
37. Why did Jerome Translate Tobit and Judith?* | Harvard Theological ... https://www.cambridge.org/core/journals/harvard-theological-review/article/why-did-jerome-translate-tobit-and-judith/C4B3F527964D985883F5B7DC6E125AEE
38. EVIL, ORIGINAL SIN, AND EVOLUTION - PENDERGAST, S.J. - 2009 https://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/10.1111/j.1468-2265.2009.00472.x
39. Saint Augustine - Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy https://plato.stanford.edu/archives/fall2015/entries/augustine/
40. A Catholic Commentary On Holy - Orchard, Bernard, M.A. (Cantab https://www.scribd.com/document/695930788/A-Catholic-Commentary-on-Holy-Orchard-Bernard-M-a-Cantab-7785
41. (DOC) Augustine's Doctrine of Original Sin in its Historical, Linguistic ... https://www.academia.edu/52675769/Augustine_s_Doctrine_of_Original_Sin_in_its_Historical_Linguistic_Jewish_and_Patristic_Contexts
42. [PDF] The Septuagint and the Masoretic Text in the Orthodox Church(es) https://sciendo.com/2/v2/download/article/10.2478/ress-2018-0003.pdf
43. (PDF) The Book of Tobit in early Christianity: Greek and Latin ... https://www.researchgate.net/publication/347379653_The_Book_of_Tobit_in_early_Christianity_Greek_and_Latin_interpretations_from_the_2nd_to_the_5th_century_CE
44. [PDF] Early Christian Theology: The Patristic Period, c.100–451 https://catalogimages.wiley.com/images/db/pdf/9781119870340.excerpt.pdf
45. IMPACT OF JUDE'S CITATION OF ι ENOCH ON - jstor https://www.jstor.org/stable/23971462
46. (PDF) The Canonization of the Epistle of Jude in Relation to the ... https://www.researchgate.net/publication/338987044_The_Canonization_of_the_Epistle_of_Jude_in_Relation_to_the_Rejection_of_the_Book_of_Enoch_Rejection_of_the_Book_of_Enoch
47. "Jude's Citation of 1 Enoch: From Tertullian to Jacob of Edessa ... https://www.academia.edu/4642950/_Judes_Citation_of_1_Enoch_From_Tertullian_to_Jacob_of_Edessa_Pages_113_28_in_Jewish_and_Christian_Scriptures_The_Function_of_Canonical_and_Non_Canonical_Religious_Texts_Edited_by_James_H_Charlesworth_and_Lee_Martin_McDonald_Edinburgh_T_and_T_Clark_2010

48. The Angelomorphic Spirit of Wisdom in the Wisdom of Solomon https://journals.sagepub.com/doi/10.1177/09518207251358136
49. (PDF) The theological paraphrasing of history: The Exodus tradition ... https://www.researchgate.net/publication/262721051_The_theological_paraphrasing_of_history_The_Exodus_tradition_in_the_Wisdom_of_Solomon
50. (PDF) The Apostolic Fathers: The Didache - ResearchGate https://www.researchgate.net/publication/249762583_The_Apostolic_Fathers_The_Didache
51. [PDF] Authority and Canonicity of the Book of Tobit - ResearchGate https://www.researchgate.net/profile/Michal-Wojciechowski-5/publication/273462227_Authority_and_Canonicity_of_the_Book_of_Tobit/links/5504227d0cf231de07706799/Authority-and-Canonicity-of-the-Book-of-Tobit.pdf
52. [PDF] The Roman Empire of the Apocalypse: History, Eschatology, and the ... https://escholarship.org/content/qt4k49s13w/qt4k49s13w_noSplash_a269e183cb1d452bc6bbed56b4a8d56f.pdf
53. Athanasius' 39th Festal Letter Explained | PDF - Scribd https://www.scribd.com/document/99554418/Athanasius-of-Alexandria
54. The Origins of Christian Monasticism to the Eighth Century (Part I) https://www.cambridge.org/core/books/cambridge-history-of-medieval-monasticism-in-the-latin-west/origins-of-christian-monasticism-to-the-eighth-century/023DD7CE2B81DEB99B60C15A9520A25C
55. [PDF] The Doctrine of in St. Athanasius' Paschal Letters - orthokAIROS https://orthokairos.weebly.com/uploads/5/7/3/1/57311059/the_doctrine_of_sanctification_in_st_athanasius__paschal_letters_-_fr_matthais_wahba.pdf
56. Augustine's Doctrine of Original Sin | PDF - Scribd https://www.scribd.com/document/273841784/THE-MINISTRY-OF-SAINT-AUGUSTINE-AS-RELATED-TO-THE-DOCTRINE-OF-ORIGINAL-SIN
57. Casey J. Chalk - The Obscurity of Scripture - Disputing Sola ... - Scribd https://www.scribd.com/document/990057854/Casey-J-Chalk-The-Obscurity-of-Scripture-Disputing-Sola-Scriptura-and-the-Protestant-Notion-of-Biblical-Perspicuity-2023-Emmaus-Academic-Libg
58. Festal Letters | PDF | Athanasius Of Alexandria | Religion And Belief https://www.scribd.com/document/208117501/Festal-Letters
59. The Apocrypha in the Sixteenth Century: A Summary and Survey - jstor https://www.jstor.org/stable/42973978
60. (PDF) The Implications of Jude's Use of 1 Enoch - Academia.edu https://www.academia.edu/26540834/The_Implications_of_Jude_s_Use_of_1_Enoch

61. THE "OLD TESTAMENT": A CHRISTIAN CANON - jstor https://www.jstor.org/stable/43712161
62. (PDF) A HISTORY OF OLD ENGLISH LITERATURE - Academia.edu https://www.academia.edu/36629610/A_HISTORY_OF_OLD_ENGLISH_LITERATURE
63. Myths of the Apocrypha - Part I - Conciliar Post https://conciliarpost.com/theology-spirituality/church-history/myths-of-the-apocrypha-part-i/
64. The Reception of the Bible in the Post-New Testament Period (Part V) https://www.cambridge.org/core/books/new-cambridge-history-of-the-bible/reception-of-the-bible-in-the-postnew-testament-period/854406B57894C0E0680363521662D111
65. History of The Canon of The Holy Scriptures in The Christian Church ... https://www.scribd.com/document/99068476/History-of-the-Canon-of-the-Holy-Scriptures-in-the-Christian-Church-E-Reuss-1884
66. A History of Theology and Reality of Indulgences and Purgatory https://www.academia.edu/36806009/Indulgences_A_History_of_Theology_and_Reality_of_Indulgences_and_Purgatory
67. “A principio fuit canonicus”: The Controversy over 1 Enoch in ... https://www.cambridge.org/core/journals/harvard-theological-review/article/principio-fuit-canonicus-the-controversy-over-1-enoch-in-seventeenthcentury-europe/90E6E8293A50B4E33808562D3F6AD685
68. Bede on Jude - Nicholas J. Moore, 2025 - Sage Journals https://journals.sagepub.com/doi/10.1177/00145246241312115
69. (PDF) The Septuagint as a holy text – The first 'bible' of the early ... https://www.researchgate.net/publication/345364644_The_Septuagint_as_a_holy_text_-_The_first_'bible'_of_the_early_church
70. Synod of Hippo (393 A.D.) – The 4 Marks https://4marksofthechurch.com/synod-of-hippo-393-a-d/
71. Donaldson - Explicit Variants in Church Fathers B - Scribd https://www.scribd.com/document/74432027/Donaldson-Explicit-Variants-in-Church-Fathers-B
72. Augustine's Doctrine of Original Sin Explained - TikTok https://www.tiktok.com/@maklelan/video/7069404348861861166
73. The Divine Canon of Scripture: A Defense of the 66-Book Old and ... https://www.academia.edu/162472446/The_Divine_Canon_of_Scripture_A_Defense_of_the_66_Book_Old_and_New_Testaments_and_Its_Self_Authenticating_Nature
74. History of the Old Testament Canon | PDF | Bible Translations - Scribd https://www.scribd.com/document/163248433/Canon-and-Text-of-the-Old-Testament-F-Buhl-1892

75. (PDF) Zakka Labib & Samuel Moawad , “St Athanasius of Alexandria https://www.academia.edu/7190078/Zakka_Labib_and_Samuel_Moawad_St_Athanasius_of_Alexandria_the_39th_Festal_Letter_in_367_AD_in_Journal_of_Alexandria_School_Alexandria_sept_2013
76. AUGUSTINE THE SEMI-PELAGIAN - jstor https://www.jstor.org/stable/44993230
77. [PDF] On Augustine's Interpretation of Romans 5:12 - Semantic Scholar https://pdfs.semanticscholar.org/c397/5b385b14e94f24c36f1a2b9a553403f2edee.pdf
78. Pelagius on Romans 5:12-21 Exegesis | PDF | Original Sin - Scribd https://www.scribd.com/document/859022242/DE-BRUYN-Pelagius-Interpretation-of-Rom-5-12-21